Balancing Act: A Masterclass with Juggle Strategies

3pm, Thursday 17 May
Pullman Sydney Hyde Park
36 College Street, Sydney, NSW

Are you struggling to manage your work life balance? Flexible work just may be what you need. EA has partnered with Juggle Strategies to bring you the EA Women in Engineering Masterclass in Flexible Working.

At the Masterclass we will:

- Show how flexible work is actually good for both you and your organisation;
- Help you consider and prepare your own conversation around flexibility;
- Offer insights on how to make it work successfully; and
- Discuss challenges and issues that may arise.

We will also hear from a number of people who "live and breathe" flexibility day to day, and will have a chance to have a real conversation about the opportunities and challenges they have faced.

EA has partnered with Juggle Strategies, who work with progressive organisations to make flexible work “business as usual”. Through a program of consulting, coaching, training and diagnostics they help their clients move past the policy and branding and make flexible work reality for their people.

Juggle Strategies was founded by Maja Paleka and Kate Kesby, who decided to take their experience and capability, and put it to something they are deeply passionate about. Having had two very diverse, but rewarding careers - Maja is an electrical engineer who also spent time in sales and operations and Kate comes from a commerce background - coupled with post graduate study, families and volunteering, they live and breathe the juggle daily.
